FOUNDATION

Providing support. Offering hope.

2025 Impact Report

About FHF

Founded in 2006 by Michelle and Lonnie Somers after their experience with Twin-to-Twin Transfusion Syndrome, the Foundation was born to provide families with reliable information, access to specialized care, and hope for the best possible outcomes.

Today, FHF impacts thousands of families and providers worldwide by delivering trusted education, meaningful support, and vital connections when they matter most.

In 2015, we launched the Fetal Therapy Think Tank to help move fetal medicine forward. This collaborative alliance brings together leading experts to drive research and innovation, expand education, and strengthen the infrastructure needed to advance care for the most complex fetal conditions.

What we did for families & supporters

Published more than 30 patient stories reflecting parents' lived fetal health journeys.

Engaged families in parent-focused research through surveys, interviews, and studies.

Launched "More Than Nine" podcast

Expanded fetal syndrome website content

What will be better because of it

Families feel seen, informed, and connected through shared, authentic parent perspectives.

Research and programs better reflect real family needs and priorities.

Broader awareness of fetal health topics through accessible, human-centered storytelling

Families can more easily find accurate, condition-specific information

Why it's important

Parent voices strengthen trust, empathy, and family-centered care across systems.

Parent-driven research leads to outcomes that better reflect real family needs.

Education saves lives and empowers families during critical decision-making

In times of crisis, facts and clarity can be life-changing
